THE COMMONS' LEADERSHIP.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Although the reports of Lord Randolph Churchill's intention of returning to the cabinet have died away since parliament was prorogued, it must not be supposed that the movement in his favor is entirely at an end. It was never strongly supported nor so nearly being successful as his friends chose to represent, but it will be kept alive until the inevitable re-construction of the government is completed. As a matter of fact, one of Lord Randolph's friends in the House of Commons has been making inquiries among the Conservative members during the past week as to the feeling on the subject, and has compiled a list of some of those who are favorable to his return to the government, if not as leader at all events in some important capacity.
It includes several members whose names, if published, would cause surprise.
Notwithstanding the denials that have been forthcoming, there is the best reason to believe that certain enquiries more or less official in their origin, have been on foot as to the general feeling of the Tory members with regard to the government's leadership of the House of Commons in the autumn session. They have resulted in placing the fact beyond doubt that the accession of Rt.
Hon. George J. Goschen, chancellor of the exchequer, to the leadership, is entirely out of the question, and although the objections to Sir Michael Hicks-Beach were not strong, it was found that the compromise which would be involved in his appointment had a far larger number of opponents than was anticipated. The chief objection to Mr.
Goschen's leadership, apart from the fact that he still calls himself a Unionist, is his "dictatorial manner." The objection to Sir Michael Hicks-Beach is his unapproach-ability. Mr. Goschen listens patiently to any representations made him, but insists on having his own way, even at the risk of ruining a session, as he did the last one, with his local taxation bill. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach is well and his irritability has made enemies.
The prevailing feeling is altogether in favor of Mr. Smith's retention of the post during the next session, even if something has to be done to lighten his labors and to enable him to leave St. Stephen's early in each sitting instead of waiting until its conclusion.

NOT SATISFIED.

All advances from Berlin agree that the German Emperor is not satisfied with the result of his visit to the Czar. He found that monarch's unalterable determination that there should be no recognition of Bulgaria by Russia until the Bulgarians had accepted a Russian protectorate, and this the Kaiser knew to be impossible. Bulgaria is developing gradually and surely into a state whose importance and strength cannot be ignored in European calculations. It is, in fact, the leading state of the Balkans, and is as powerful a barrier to Russia as Poland was in an earlier age, while the military organization, being centralized and effective, is much more formidable than that of Poland ever was. Rumania is understood to have joined in a common arrangement with Bulgaria against Russian intrigues and both states are under the friendly guardianship of Austria. The latter power may regard as a menace or otherwise, the fact that on Saturday next, Sept. 6th, six corps of the Russian army, consisting of 150,000 men, will commence a series of manoeuvres at Volynia, near the Austrian frontier. These operations will exceed in magnitude and interest the recent manoeuvres at Narva witnessed by the German Emperor. The noted Russian commanders, Generals Gourko and Dragomiroff, will direct the troops. In this connection it may be mentioned that

ITALIAN MILITARY MANOEUVRES

closed to-day with a grand sham fight, at which King Humbert was present. Sixty thousand men took part in full war equipment. Smokeless powder was used for the guns with, as a whole, satisfactory results, and the photo-electric signals were also tried for the first time. The great nations of Europe are playing at war while all are declaring in favor of peace. The difference between the Czar and the Kaiser is said to even have assumed a personal aspect, the sovereigns being equally stubborn and equally autocratic. One significant fact is that the regulations restricting the exercise of the Lutheran faith in the Baltic provinces of Russia have been made more severe since the Emperor's departure, although at the time of the Kaiser's arrival the persecution was somewhat relaxed.It is more and more evident that the interests of Russia and of Germany are irreconcilable, and that the struggle which will test the mastery of Europe although deferred is unavoidable. That the Kaiser has succeeded in winning the good will of the working classes not only throughout Germany but throughout the continent his receptions everywhere sufficiently attested. The Czar on the other hand is more than afflicted with fear of Nihilist plots, and apparently with reason. Not only his down-trodden subjects, but his own friends and attendants, even his brother Alexis the Grand Duke, who visited America, has been snubbed by the autocrat who has also refused to trust his half-brother, the son of Princess Dolgorouski, in any higher capacity than a private soldier in the guards. The two men, the Czar and the Kaiser, are as opposite in character as they are masterful and selfwilled in disposition.

THE POLICY OF TRADES UNIONS.

The change which has come over the policy of trades unions in recent years is made the subject of various long editorial articles in the newspapers. It is pointed out that the objects of the unions are approaching more nearly to those of socialism, especially in regard to limitation of hours of labor and various other radical propositions. The prospect has been issued of a general labor union, which is described as being in the interest of both capital andlabor. One of its chief objects will be to decide disputes in regard to wages and other differences between employers and employed. It is evident that the scheme is devised by the employers in the hope of diverting their attention from purely labor organizations.
An attempt will be made to get this plan adopted by the labor congress which is about to meet at Liverpool. There will be 420 delegates, many of whom will have already arrived. A struggle between the Conservative and Radical elements of trades unionism is expected to occur during the sessions of that body.

IRELAND DOWNS ENGLAND.

Maher Knocks Out Bowman in a Spirited Battle with Gloves.DUBLIN, Aug. 29.—A glove match took place here last night between Alf. Bowman, middleweight champion of England, and Peter Maher, champion of Ireland, for a purse of £50, under Marquis of Queensberry rules. Bowman was the favorite at the opening.During the first two rounds the men confined themselves to sparring, Bowman showing his superiority as a boxer. In the third and fourth Maher forced the fighting, driving Bowman up to the ropes and repeatedly knocking him down.The fifth round was a perfect whirlwind, Maher fought Bowman all round the ring, forcing him over the ropes.When time was called for the sixth round Bowman came up groggy, and a heavy blow on the head put him to sleep, and Maher was declared the winner.

RICH OLD CARIBBOO.

The Stamp Mill at the Island Mountain Quartz Mines Doing Good Work.Everything Working Splendidly—The Black Jack Mill Working Day and Night.BARKERVILLE, B. C., Aug. 30.—The 10-Stamp Mill at the Island Mountain quartz mines started up last week. The plates are said to look well; but how much that means to the ton of ore crushed we have no means of knowing. They crush a little over a ton an hour, but as yet they have only run day shifts. They expect to run night and day after a day or two. The rock breaker works splendidly, eating up the ore into small pieces, and seemingly calling for more. The stamps, and in fact all the machinery, run very smoothly, showing that Mr. May knows his business. The stamps are at present working on ore from the Johns tunnel, situated about half-a-mile above the mill.
Two men are getting out ore, which, with the ore on the dump, keeps two teams busy hauling. The company have put in a car track to the lower tunnel of the graphite, about 15,000 feet from the mill, and the government have built a wagon road to the upper tunnel of the same claim, so there ought to be no lack of ore to keep the mill busy for some time. The sulphuric acid will be stored until the government works are ready to treat them, which will probably be in six or seven weeks. The Black Jack quartz mill is crushing rock and working day and night. The company have but one stamp and are sinking a shaft.
The placers are looking well.

AMERICAN NEWS.

Fatal Train Accident.

SHAWNEE, Ohio, Aug. 30.—A work train on the Columbus, Shawnee and Hocking railroad, jumped the track while running down a grade half a mile east of here this morning. The engine turned over, killing engineer Ed. Hill and fireman John Scanlan.
The latter lost a wife and child. Hill's home was at New Concord, Ohio. A brakeman was seriously injured.

The Deadly Electric Wire.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 30.—Thomas Bee, aged 22, a lineman in the employ of the Brush Electric Light Co., while standing on the tree escape of the Caxton Printing Works building, at 43 East Third street, this morning, caught hold of a live wire and received a charge of 2,000 volts of electricity and fell back dead. His right hand was burned to a crisp.

A Dangerous Explosive.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 30.—A cartridge in a hole drilled in a ledge which is being removed to accommodate a sewer system, was exploded this morning by some Italians. One man's arm was shattered and his body so torn by stones that he died in a short time. Another man's eyes were blown out and had cuts made in his scalp, and he barely escaped being brain. Two others, whose names are unknown, were also severely hurt.

UNCLE SAM'S NEW CRUISER.

The "San Francisco" Receives an Ovation Upon Her Return to Port from Santa Barbara.SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—The United States cruiser San Francisco returned from Santa Barbara this morning. She entered Golden Gate about 8 o'clock, and steamed slowly up the bay to her anchorage off the Union Iron works. The cruiser was covered with flags and hunting of every description. About fifty brooms were tied to the smokestack, stanchions, davits and every upright portion of the vessel, and on the smokestack and along the sides were painted in large figures "20.06," indicating the rate of speed she attained during the last 10 knots of her trial trip in Santa Barbara channel Wednesday. The crew had spent two hours in the early morning decorating the ship, and many of the devices were very striking.The firemen showed the part they had taken to enable the vessel to break the record by stringing a row of black coal bakets between the smokestacks, and they had also fastened to the stacks and other parts of the ship, arms consisting of crossed coal shovels, from which were suspended huge demijohns, on which were printed in white figures, "20.06."Capt. C. M. Goodall, the San Francisco's commander, stood on the bridge with his hand on the cord connecting with the fog siren, and for nearly an hour he kept it blowing almost constantly, in response to salutes from every side. By Capt. Goodall's side stood Irving Scott, general manager of the Union works, waving his hat enthusiastically all the time.Naval officers aboard were on the bridge and almost the entire crew were crowded on the decks, giving back the ringing cheers at every salute. When the cruiser arrived off the Washington street wharf the noise became deafening. Tug boats, coast steamers and factories blew their whistles and a hundred shrill noises were mingled with the deep tones of the siren, which must have been heard all over the city.

LATEST FROM HONOLULU.

A Lepers' Uprising Causes the report of Another Revolution.POINT TOWNSEND, Aug. 29.—W. E. Wall and E. C. Rowe were passengers on the schooner Vesta, which left Honolulu for this port August 9 and arrived yesterday, bringing advices two days later than the United States cruiser Charleston. The gentlemen state that everything was quiet on the islands. Rowe is a prominent contractor at Honolulu and Wall is an attaché of the government surveyor general's office.
They state that the night before the Charleston sailed T. E. Evans, the assistant surintendent of the leper colony of Molokai came in great haste to Honolulu, bringingthe news of an uprising of 800 lepers confined in the settlement, and that most have given Admiral Brown an idea that the natives threatened a general uprising.

DISCONTENT UNIVERSAL.

Both gentlemen admit the existence of almost universal discontent, but think the government too firmly established for the overthrow of the Kalakaua dynasty to be accomplished. In the legislature elected last February the natives have a majority of one on joint ballot. Since the result has been announced the natives see their power.
The present constitution confers the power of suffrage only on those who have an income of $50 a month or possess property valued at $5,000. This keeps the Kalakauas out of power. Mass meetings have been recently held agitating the subject of a new constitution, which will not contain the income or property qualification.Robert Wilcox, who led last year's rebellion, is at the head of the malcontents and is believed to be the instrument of Princess Leikilouani. The latter is Kalakaua's sister.
She is idolized by the natives, who seek to have her deliverance from the domination of the whites. Should there ever be a revolution she will be elected queen. Wilcox was tried for treason by a native jury sitting in the case and was unanimously acquitted. He was a candidate for election as a member of the House of Representatives at the last election from one of the Honolulu districts and was triumphantly elected. He has great power over his countrymen.

VISITORS FROM OTTAWA.

Mr. Lowe, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, and Mr. Barland, of the British American Bank Note Co. Leave for the East.Among late arrivals at the Diard were Mr. John Lowe, deputy minister of Agriculture, and Mr. G. B. Barland, president of the British American Bank Note Co.

MR. LOWE.

It may be mentioned, was, for many years, associated with his brother-in-law, Mr.
Brown Chamberlain, at present Queen's printer, in the editorship of the Montreal Gazette. A COLONIST reporter showed Mr.
Lowe the following dispatch, which had been published in the American papers:"CHOLERA SURF TO VISIT CANADA."
"QUEBEC, Aug. 25.—The Deputy Minister of Agriculture declares the Asiatic cholera will certainly visit Canada next year, and that in order to check its advances he proposes to establish quarantine stations in British Columbia."Mr. Lowe observed that this was all moonshine. He was certainly here in a semi-official capacity, and had closely looked into matters connected with his department. As far as regarded cholera, it was very true that it might come here, but he did not see that it had travelled far in this direction, and probably would not come at all. However, it was the intention of the Government to make the quarantine system as perfect as possible, and without question, British Columbia being an important centre would have all possible attention.
He considered Dr. McN. Jones to be a very efficient officer and in every way his hands would be strengthened, so as to make the service as perfect as possible. As regards immigration, it was very true that British Columbia was a very distant point to reach, a fact which prevented the less eligible description of people coming here. There was, however, every facility presented to those who did come, and in Mr. Jessop, he was convinced, the province had a gentleman who was eminently qualified for his post.
The chances were that, in the future, this province would be much more sought after, in view of recent developments and all movements in this direction would be encouraged as far as possible.

MR. G. B. BURLAND

remarked that he had come here on pleasure, and in company with his friend, Mr.
Lowe; like whom he had been immensely delighted with his experiences both of travel and in the cities where he had called. He had property interests in Winnipeg, with the prospects of which he had been very well pleased. Both he and Mr.
Lowe would leave with the most satisfactory reminiscences, both of the city itself and the friends they had met here.

FROM ASIATIC RUSSIA.

The barkentine Catherine Arrives at Port Townsend from Siberia—Notes of Interest from the Far North.

(Port Townsend Leader.)

The barkentine Catherine Sudden, Captain John Thomas, came into port Friday evening from a voyage to Nicolaeve and the Amoor river, in Siberia. She left San Francisco for Siberia on April 5th last, and has been on the voyage ever since. Her cargo consisted of flour, salt and other supplies for Messrs. Smith & Emery, a San Francisco firm that is engaged in business at this frozen place.

The long voyage of the Catherine Sudden, Captain Thomas says, is due to the unavoidable delay at the mouth of the Amoor river on account of it being blocked with ice. He left San Francisco about two months too early, and was compelled to wait for the summer season, of which there are only about two months—July and August—in this part of Siberia.

The Amoor river is navigable for small steamers a distance of about 1,000 miles from its mouth, but it is very hard to navigate in on account of the narrow channel. It is about 30 miles wide at its mouth, but the channel is little more than 100 feet wide, and sailing vessels can only enter it with a fair wind. A distance of 175 miles from the mouth, where Captain Thomas went, the river is about 10 miles wide, and the channel scarcely more than 60 feet wide.

The Catherine arrived at the mouth of the Amoor river on June 1st, but on account of there being so much floating ice in the river and the lack of fair wind also, she was compelled to remain there 26 days before proceeding to her destination. Captain Thomas says he scarcely saw a really nice day on his whole voyage. He encountered no storms, but either fog or clouds shut off the sunlight on the whole trip. He left the Japan coast 23 days ago, and did not have a clear day while coming across the Pacific.

This is the first voyage of Captain Thomas to the foreign land of the exiles, and he says he found nothing agreeable about it in any sense. In the first place there is little there to invite or attract people who are accustomed to the ways of civilization. The natives are an ignorant superstitious set of people who care little for the march of progress and are afraid to take up any new idea lest the wrath of their numerous gods might descend on them in some terrible way. They profess the Greek Catholic faith when they profess any faith at all, and the priest is practically at the head of the whole settlement where his members are found. In color the natives are almost black, and some of them still wear the "pig tail" or queue. It will be remembered that what is now the empire of Siberia was formerly part of the great Chinese empire, and before coming into the possession of Russia the inhabitants were largely Chinese. They are now mostly of mixed blood, there being very few actual Russians.

Captain Thomas does not entertain a very exalted opinion of the settlers in these Siberian districts. He says they are lazy and treacherous, and very few of them would hesitate to murder for even a small amount of gain or to right some fancied grievance. Nicolaeve is near the Gulf of Tartary, which separates Saghalien island from the mainland, and is from 20 to 40 miles wide. The mines of Saghalien island are where the Russian exiles are sentenced to labor for years or for life. While in Siberia with his vessel Captain Thomas saw a great many Russian exiles huddled into the island. They were driven along in droves like so many cattle, except that the men are chained together. Whole families are generally taken, and if any one gets too sick to travel along with his companions he is taken out and shot, and left to die by the roadside, while his shackles are removed to be used on another unfortunate.

Most of the supplies for this district are taken from Germany and Norway in steamers, although three or four vessels go from San Francisco every summer. The schooners J. C. Ford and Reporter are now on the way with cargoes.

RUM CAUSED THE TROUBLE.

San Domingo and Hayti at Loggerheads Over the Question of Imports—The Haytian Troops Repulsed.

CITY OF SAN DOMINGO, Aug. 24.—Information has just reached this capital that on the night of August 20th 800 Haytian troops, stationed near the frontier of the Domingo republic, invaded the territory of this country. The Dominican government despatched an armed force to drive out the intruders. The Haytian troops were repulsed and 23 men killed and a number of others wounded. The Dominicans had but four soldiers injured.

Great indignation is felt here at Hayti's act in this invasion of Dominican soil, and the Dominican cabinet has been called together by President Hoid to consider the advisability of declaring war against Hayti. President Hoid said that the real cause of the trouble is that in 1875-76 a treaty for commercial union purposes was entered into between the Haytian and Dominican governments, which at the same time defined the boundaries of the two countries.

A special stipulation of this treaty was that Hayti was to make use of a portion of Dominican territory which she needed, and by which Santa Domingo was to be allowed to be so used on condition that Hayti should pay annually to the Dominican government $150,000, as long as she retained possession of the loaned territory. Hayti was, moreover, to permit all imports from Santa Domingo to enter Hayti free of duty. Hayti has not paid the $150,000 for a great number of years, and now owes something over $2,000,000. Hayti alleges that there is too much rum imported from Santa Domingo, and that Haytian revenues are greatly suffering.

Hayti wishes to make an end of her bargain and at the same time retain possession of the loaned land.

THE OCEAN TERMINUS OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

PORT CRESCENT.

A FEW UNDENIABLE FACTS:

President T. F. Oakes says the Victoria, Port Crescent and Chehalis Railway will be completed by the 31st December, 1891. This will make Port Crescent the terminus of the strongest corporation on the American Continent. Work on the breakwater will commence immediately and will be completed during next year; the Harbor will then accommodate 120 ships, allowing one cable (see Minard on Harbors) to each large merchant vessel in which to swing, not including twice that number which might be tied up to wharves. Port Crescent will then be possessed of one of the best harbors on the coast.

The soundings on the Company's Map are guaranteed to be correct.

More than 3,000,000 acres of the richest land in the State of Washington, lying to the West and Southwest, are directly tributary to Port Crescent.

It is confidently predicted that in ten years the population of Port Crescent will rival that of Tacoma and Seattle combined.

We strongly recommend to our friends and the public generally the advisability of securing a few lots at present prices. Lots, that to-day can be bought for hundreds, will be worth in a few months as many thousands. We have a limited number of choice lots at present on sale.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

To THE EDITOR:—Is Victoria to have a system of sewerage in the near future, or must the present abominable, filthy, and disgraceful state of affairs continue until the smouldering fire of disease break into an epidemic of flame? Surely there is sickness enough in the city now; and it is unequivocally certain that the longer drainage is postponed, the more virulent will the poison-beds of disease become. There are, no doubt, many objectors to this, as there always will be to any proposed expenditure for city improvements. But is the health of Victorians, and the good name of Victoria to be held in so little esteem as to be deemed of less value than a paltry $200,000? To have a well-planned system of sewerage is worth more, in actual cash value, and in the good healthy, vigorous condition of citizens, than can be expressed in mere dollars and cents—important as these factors are. Victoria is sadly in need of a physician. Severe drastic treatment is needed, and happily a cure is within reach. Must it not be seized, regardless even of the cash cost? It must be. Influenced by cupidity, a selfish disregard for others, or by some equally unworthy motive, there may be those who have almost decided to throw the whole weight of their influence and vote against the sewerage by-law. Let these bear in mind that if they, by such action, are instrumental in bringing about the rejection of this by-law, they will virtually be responsible for every death in the city that is the result of the vile anti-sanitary condition that now obtains. The example of Munich, quoted by Dr. Jones a day or two ago, as recorded by Von Pettenkofer, and the figures given by that observer and also those relating to the morbidity and mortality from typhoid given by Von Ziemssen, afford all the proof that is needed to demonstrate the beneficial effect of sewerage.

For the information of those sceptics who require verse and chapter for every statement, I may say that excellent abstracts (from which Dr. Jones quotes) of the papers by Von Pettenkofer and Von Ziemssen, are to be found in the "Annals of the Universal Medical Sciences," for 1890. I think Dr. Jones might, in his synopsis of these abstracts, have advantageously emphasized the value of the figures given by Von Pettenkofer. To really see what was accomplished, let us divide the period from 1853 to 1887 (inclusive) into terms of seven years each, and ascertain what was the average annual death rate from typhoid fever per 100,000 in each term.

We find that in the term—
1853 to 1859, the average annual mortality was 212
1860 to 1866, the average annual mortality was 177
1867 to 1873, the average annual mortality was 121
1874 to 1880, the average annual mortality was 85
1881 to 1887, the average annual mortality was 17

A truly wonderful, marked and progressive reduction! Every term shows a decided improvement on the preceding one, and each step for the better can be traced to advances made in the sanitary arrangements of Munich. First, there is the immense diminution of evil pollution, effected by water-tight middens. This was accomplished in the period 1854 to 1860. Observe the result in the next three terms. Then comes the abolition of numerous private slaughter houses, and next follow the system of sewerage and improved water supply.

"The middens in Victoria are identical with those existing in Munich prior to 1854. Perhaps we ran westward ho! to rapidly and have had to pick up the thread of civilization where it was a half century ago. In the abstract already referred to occurs the following: "Many householders did not see the utility of spending money on making them" (the middens) "water-tight. An otherwise intelligent man complained bitterly in Van Pettenkofer's hearing of being obliged to make such a change. He had built a new house and had fulfilled the requirements of the law. Now, however, he had to put a similar arrangement into an old house, and yet the old midden was much better than that in the new one. The midden in the new house was running over in a couple of months and had to be cleaned out, whilst the old one had not required cleaning out for twenty years." (Annual Univ. Med. Sciences, 1890.)

Perhaps many of our middens are fully as good as this. It required time to effect a radical cure in Munich. Do Victorians wish to try all these palliative measures first, or will they, like sensible men, accept the results of experience and boldly and at once attack the very root of the matter, and by supporting the city council have Victoria drained and served as quickly as such can be effectually accomplished! The fitting up of old cess-pits, the prompt and decisive disposal of garbage and sewerage will, if given the chance, do as much for Victoria as Von Pettenkofer and Von Ziemssen have shown was accomplished for Munich by the adoption of similar sanitary measures. F. C. S.

"DID NOT HAVE."

To THE EDITOR: Those who remember the charming books of our childhood, "Common objects of the seashore" and "Common objects of the country" (I speak of 25 years ago), will bear in mind how many things therein described as "common" were to them very uncommon, and, judging others by myself (one of the weakest forms of "tu quoque"), I can suppose them to recollect the perfectly amiable envy with which they regarded those to whom these uncommon objects were common. There are also in this country, as in others, some "common objects of philology," which, to a reflective mind, are very well worth considering and perhaps correcting. I will beg your leave to say a little of one of these, seriously from a philological point of view. It is, I presume, an Americanism which has got loose and escaped over the border; and if a shotgun would bring it down I would have returned with it over my shoulder before this. This "common object" is "didn't have." (e. y. "I didn't have time.") This is a most curious example of the extraordinary eccentricities which will unexpectedly force themselves upon one knows how—upon a science of which all the known laws are of the strictest. By laws, of course, I mean laws discovered, as in astronomy; not "inventions of the schoolmen." For, just consider how many curiosities there are in this "common object." Here you have first a verb "do," a strong enough verb in itself, but which has especially in its aoristic sense sunk into a sort of senile decay and become a mere auxiliary; and not only that, but so long ago that in the case of nine verbs out of ten "did" had before Chaucer's time become the mere "d" of the past tense as in covered for cover did (did cover). Meanwhile, alongside of this "do" and "does" live on as strong as ever to the present day; "dost" and "doth" have slowly died within the last 300 years; "did" has fallen gradually into the place of auxiliary to verbs, which have no separate tense-form for the imperfect, as, "I did not go, feel, like," etc., etc.; when the true perfect I knew not, felt not, etc., had gradually become obsolete,—partly, probably, in consequence of the great silent space in literature (caused in some measure by political excitement) between the Elizabethan galaxy of illustrious writers and the writers of Queen Anne's reign. But never yet in England has it such a law as to be a mere parasite to a brother half auxiliary like "have."

"Had" has never gone to sleep, and "Had not" remains unmoved. "I had not time" is English. "I did not have" is not. It may be American or any other language. But it is a very curious expression, and if I could write its history—beyond conjecture—after the style of "The Adventures of a Shilling," I say "the cruel suffering of an auxiliary verb," I would do so. I am not speaking in any way disrespectfully of it. As far as analogy is concerned, "did not have" has as much reason as "did not know"; but we have not to deal with analogy in discussing an expression for which it is impossible to make any given man or body of men responsible. In philology it must be remembered that language, not man, is king. I merely wish to draw attention to what queer pranks his majesty sometimes makes his liege play.

Faithfully yours,
T. WASTIE GREEN.

THE EXHIBITION.

We are pleased to learn that appearances indicate that the Provincial Exhibition, to be held in this city, early in October, will be, in every respect, worthy of the city and the province. The prospect is that there will be a splendid exhibition of agricultural and horticultural products, and that the show of stock will be superior to anything ever yet seen in British Columbia. The breeders of thorough-bred stock see the necessity of letting the world know how far British Columbia has advanced in stock raising. The manufacturers do not seem so keen to make a good display at the Exhibition as the farmers, gardeners and stock raisers. This is to be regretted. They are doing well and turning out of their factories and workshops articles that would be a credit to any part of the Dominion. They should not hide their light under a bushel. They should let all visitors to the exhibition know that the man who comes to British Columbia will not settle in a wild country in which the farmer will be obliged to have recourse to all sorts of makeshifts in order to supply himself with substitutes for the conveniences he has been used to in the east, but will find ready to his hand and of the most modern make, and the best quality, everything he needs on the farm, or for his housekeeping. Nothing would do more to dispel the notion that this is a raw and rough country, in which the settler must calculate upon putting up with all sorts of inconveniences than a good display of our home manufactures. The prizes offered by the Association are not to be despised, but the inducement that they hold out to the manufacturer is inconsiderable compared with the advantage that will be derived from making it known that this province has made good progress in manufacturing what it needs for itself. We do trust that the manufacturers and mechanics will think this matter well over and make up their minds to be adequately represented at the coming exhibition. Every one of them is interested in making the Victoria Exhibition a success.

IGNORANT ORGANS.

The organs of the Opposition in Vancouver and Victoria take a great deal of trouble to prove to the public that they are densely ignorant of everything pertaining to legislative procedure. They do not know the difference between a government bill and a public bill, and they have not the remotest idea what measures the Government are responsible for, or what measures they are not responsible for. The consequence is that they are continually blundering and continually misrepresenting the Government.

Both the News-Advertiser and the Times hold the Government accountable for what they consider the defects of the University Act. This they do in the face of the very clear statement made by Mr. Robson at the meeting of Convocation. On that occasion Mr. Robson said:

"The first result of these meetings had been that a large and influential deputation had called upon the Government to take up the bill which they had prepared at considerable trouble and expense. The question then arose as to whether the bill was of a public or private character. If private its passage would have involved the payment of a fee of $200 and a different method of procedure. The Government agreed, however, that it should be taken up as a public bill and they would give it a general support, with the understanding that while they supported the bill as it had been prepared they assumed no responsibility for it. Under the circumstances the Government did not see that they were justified in making any amendments, and allowed the measure to pass much the same as a private measure."

The bill was introduced by Mr. Duck and carried through the House under his supervision. This of itself was enough to convince any intelligent man that the bill was not a Government measure. The bills for which the Government are responsible are introduced by members of the Government and the Government take charge of them from their introduction until they are passed. The University bill was allowed to be introduced as a public bill, as we gather from Mr. Robson's speech, mainly to save those who were interested in it expense. After it was introduced Mr. Robson and the other members of the Government had no more to do with it or had no more responsibility regarding it, than Mr. Beaven or Mr. Grant, or Mr. Mason, or Mr. Haslam or any other private member of the House.

After reading Mr. Robson's speech no one but an ignorant would think of holding the Government responsible for the University Act. Private members have a perfect right to introduce public bills and to carry them through if they can get a majority to vote for them. The Hon. Mr. Eaven, for instance, two years ago introduced an elaborate Municipalities Bill. That was a public bill, and became the law of the land. But no one thinks of holding the government responsible for that measure. The fine sarcasm of the News-Advertiser and the coarser abuse of the Times with regard to this matter, only serves to make their utter ignorance more conspicuous. We say their ignorance, for we do not suppose that the editors would willfully sacrifice their reputation for intelligence for the sake of appearing to make a point against the Government. If they hold the Government responsible for the University Act, knowing that it is not responsible, their position is a good deal worse than if they did so ignorantly.

IRATE POLITICIANS.

The United States House of Representatives must contain many members that have no claim whatever to the title of gentlemen. We read of some of them using language in debate which is characterized by their fellow members as being obscene and unfit for publication. Language which is deemed unfit for publication in many American newspapers must be filthy, indeed, for we see the profanity which honorable members use published at full length. Of course, where there are bad language and oaths, there are blows. The men who use the one are certain to resort to the other. But the fighting is nothing like so strong an evidence of demoralization as the disgusting expressions which members of the House of Representatives appear to be in the habit of using. A man of refinement and gentlemanly feeling may be provoked into using violence in a place and under circumstances where such violence is most improper and unseemly, but we cannot imagine a man having any of the instincts of a gentleman using low and filthy language in any discussion, public or private.

There was a scene in the House one day last week, which would be considered disgraceful in a bar-room. Mr. Cannon used language that "savoured of snuff." Mr. Mason called Cannon a "dirty tramp." A number of members took part in the squabble. Profanity was used very freely. The members called each other liars, using expressions that in ordinary newspapers, if noticed at all, are indicated by blanks. Beckwith applied to Wilson an "epithet that is supposed to be confined to the blues and which usually means a fight." Wilson did what he was expected to do, and struck Beckwith on the jaw. Friends interfered and kept the men apart, and the Speaker tried in vain for a time to restore order. The Sergeant-at-arms was compelled to exercise his authority, and the row subsided. What is as singular as any other part of the disgraceful proceedings was that in a little while Beckwith and Wilson were seen to shake hands and to sit side by side for a quarter of an hour or so, chatting in the most friendly way. Then, in the same debate, we read of more "indecent language being used" by Cannon, which caused another disorderly scene, but not quite so violent as the first.

The account of this debate is given in an American newspaper with the profanity printed at length, but the other indecent expressions suppressed, so if it is exaggerated the exaggeration has been done by an American. But the report bears the impress of truth. We can hardly imagine any American citizen so unpatriotic as to attempt to draw such a picture of one of the two highest deliberative bodies in the Republic, if it were not true to the life.

We are quite sure that all decent American citizens must be disgusted and humiliated when they read such reports. The American gentleman, as all who have the pleasure of being acquainted with one of the class knows, is as different from the hoodlums whose conduct we see described in the reports from Washington as it is possible for a man to be. He is courteous in manner and refined in speech. He is particularly careful as to the language he uses and nothing is more offensive to him than coarseness, to say nothing of indecency. We have read a good deal about the low state of public morals in the United States and the inferiority of the men who are chosen for public positions, but nothing that we have seen is calculated to give the reader so vivid an idea of the deplorable condition into which public life in the United States has fallen as this description of what took place in the House of Representatives on Wednesday last.

A PARALLEL.

In the good old times when kings not only reigned but ruled, they were surrounded by flatterers. Designing and ambitious men who wanted to rise in the world quickly and without hard and useful work, tried to gain the favor of the monarch by grossly flattering him, by pandering to his weaknesses and his vices, and by humoring him in every way. When the monarch was weak they often succeeded. They became royal favorites, honors which they did not earn and which they did not deserve were heaped upon them and they, as long as they kept in favor with the sovereign, flourished. But, it was observed that men who climbed to eminence in this way were often dangerous to the State. The advice they gave being intended to please the king and not to benefit the country was generally bad advice. They abused the power that they had not the ability to use. The course of these favorites and flatterers generally terminated in disgrace, and they ended their days in the obscurity out of which they should never have emerged.

We live in different times now. Kings and Queens and Emperors are comparatively powerless. They cannot, to any very great extent, advance the objects of ambitious men. The people in this and in many other countries are the source of power. The road to office is through their favor. The men, therefore, who desire to rise must pay court to the people. Some try to gain their favor by honest service, by spending their time and their talents to advance the people's interests. Many of these men, it is right to say, succeed. And it is observable that when the people once know their worth they are highly valued and are advanced to places of trust and honor. In this respect it cannot be truly said that the people are as capricious as were the tyrants and potentates generally of an earlier age.

But there are men who try to ingratiate themselves with the people by using the arts of the old-time courtiers. They flatter "the public" outrageously. They fawn on the free and independent electors, they cringe to them and they try to make them believe that they are the wisest and the most virtuous men that were ever created. They advocate any principle that happens, for the moment, to be popular, with the utmost enthusiasm and they take up every cry that pleases the ear of the majority, no matter how senseless it may be and how opposed it is to the principles which they have all their lives professed. To please the people and gain votes, they will adopt any political creed and become the followers of any leader. To climb into office, there is nothing too false for them to say or too mean for them to do.

To please the majority, they are ready to vilify and to persecute all who do not give in their adherence to the popular creed of the hour. They are loud in their denunciations of those who are opposed to what they believe to be the will of the people, and, like the courtiers of old, they exhaust their vocabulary of slander and vituperation to blacken the characters of those who have incurred the displeasure of the object of their worship.

This flattery of the people and this demonstrative zeal in their service is often successful. The people like to be praised, and they are apt to reward the man who tells them that they are always right. But the politician who gets a position by the constant and unscrupulous exercise of the art of pleasing does not often possess the ability or the integrity to make a good and honest use of the power with which he is entrusted. He is after a while found out. His want of sterling worth becomes too conspicuous to be disregarded, and the day comes when flattery and loud professions of zeal and fidelity fail him and he falls.

There is a strong family resemblance between the demagogue of to-day and the "favorite" of the past age. The difference in the arts used to obtain place and power are only those which the difference of circumstances require. The courtier tried to please a man and to wheedle him out of the favors that he had to dispense. The demagogue endeavors to flatter the people and to cozen them into giving him the places which they have to bestow. The demagogue, like the favorite, is often the meanest of mankind and unworthy the honors which he gains, and is unable to keep them within his grasp. It is very seldom that either the one or the other does honest service to the commonwealth.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

We see in the American newspapers dismal telegrams predicting a famine in Ireland. It is said that the potato crop has failed there, and that the people will soon be without food. It is stated that the English papers say very little about this failure of the staple crop of the Irish peasantry, but that the truth cannot be long concealed. We cannot help thinking that if matters are anything like as bad in Ireland as these telegrams represent them to be, something would be said about them in the English newspapers. But they are, as far as we have seen, silent on the subject. In their desire to be sensational the American newspapers publish reports which contain hardly a particle of truth, and some that are complete fabrications. Why they should raise the report that a famine in Ireland is imminent it is difficult to imagine. We are curious to see out of what material this story of famine in Ireland is constructed.

A Story of Victoria.
Yesterday a newspaper man called on a citizen of Victoria who occupies a tolerably prominent position, and having transacted his business entered into conversation upon several other matters. All of a sudden—it was about two o'clock in the afternoon—the occupant of the house said, "You may possibly ask me, Mr. Reporter, in the approved interview style, if I was at the ball? I will answer that I was. You might ask how many glasses of wine I drank? and I should say I drank more than was good for me. How many cigars I smoked? and I should reply three. Did I dance? I should say that I went there to enjoy myself. I will add that I have nothing more to say, and will now proceed to show you the door."

City of Puebla Arrived.
Steamer City of Puebla arrived up from San Francisco last evening with the following passengers for Victoria:
Sister Mary, Sister Francis, Mrs. A. Mason and two daughters, W. Bentley and wife, D. Dalziel, R. Riddell, Elsie Gray, Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Hillard, W. E. Drake, C. Hillier, Miss C. Hillier, J. H. Buchanan, Mrs. L. Earle, Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. Hammond, Mrs. W. W. Munro, Miss A. Munro, Rev. A. B. Banks, Mrs. S. C. Chenebain, Mrs. C. H. Westcott, W. D. Greig, Mrs. Greig and daughter, Thos. Haughton and wife, J. Eppelhauser, six stevedores and 50 Chinese stevedores.
Altogether, including those for Victoria and Sound ports, she carried 109 cabin, and 121 steerage passengers, in all 230. Her freight cargo was made up as follows: Victoria, 230 tons; Port Townsend, 115 tons; Seattle, 923 tons; Tacoma, 530 tons; Anacortes, 50 tons; Vancouver, 40 tons. Total, 1,825 tons.

The Export of Meat.
It has been pointed out to a COLONIST representative, in regard to the export of meat from Victoria, which has been materially interfered with by the provisions of the Customs law, that if proper representations are made there can be no question of the allowance of a drawback on such meats as are imported from the United States, and are then exported from here to that country. For the exporter that, they could be brought in in bond. But, as was stated in a recent issue, this in no way meets the difficulty that would arise on account of the views entertained by the British Columbia ranchers as to the enhancement of the value of their product by the amount of the duty collected on the imported article. There ought, however, to be sufficient native grown beef to supply the Alaska market. A beef feeling existed, which resulted in the murder of George, which Daly feels sure was committed by Mikamoose. All the Indians condemn Mikamoose as a bad

Echoes of a Murder.
Some months ago the papers reported the murder of George, an Indian of the Shee-Shad tribe, on the West coast. No clue to the whereabouts of the murderer could be obtained at the time, and the event was almost allowed to sink out of memory. With that strange fatality that follows a murderer and tries to unearth his secret, the case has come to light in the shape of some Indians who seem to know something of the affair. Several Indians came down from Alberni Friday, and some of them have made a statement in regard to the murder. Daly is the name of one of these Indians, and he says that shortly after Christmas George was killed by Mikamoose, who had a grudge against the family. George was one of four brothers, and one of these was a policeman, who had once arrested Mikamoose for beating his (Mikamoose's) wife, who was George's sister. A bad feeling existed, which resulted in the murder of George, which Daly feels sure was committed by Mikamoose. All the Indians condemn Mikamoose as a bad

Man.
Their statement was taken by Principal Police Sergeant Langley, and will be reserved for future use, should occasion require it.
That Question of Faith.
Yesterday the argument in the case involving the custody and training of the minor grand-children of the late Sir James Douglas was continued by Mr. Atkin, of the firm of Drake, Jackson & Helmcken, before Mr. Justice Drake in chambers. At the conclusion His Lordship announced that he would give judgment on Tuesday.
Timely Generosity.
The honorary treasurer of the Provincial Royal Jubilee hospital begs to return, on behalf of the board of directors, hearty thanks to Miss Sophie Chambers for her handsome donation of $230, one half the proceeds of her concert on Tuesday last; likewise to thank the ladies and gentlemen who so kindly cooperated with her on that occasion.
Close Season for Salmon.
Yesterday morning all sockeye nets were hauled out of the Fraser and will not be placed in the water again until October 1st, the new close season extends from September 1st to 20th. Spring salmon nets will be the only ones allowed in the river during the close season, and if the close run is large in the morning, the fishermen will have to put up with what they can catch in the larger meshed nets.
To Be Sold for Taxes.
City Treasurer Kent has entered the real estate business, and he announces a sale of numerous very desirable city lots at the police court on Monday at noon, just as the fire bell strikes. He has not purchased or otherwise acquired these lots himself; they belong to people who have neglected to pay taxes thereon, but in order to save them to the rightful owners, Mr. Kent will take payment of arrears up to five minutes before the time of sale.
Capized on Clover Point.
Yesterday afternoon, just as the Nithet was passing Clover Point, one of the quarter-masters saw a boat upset, and its occupants thrown into the water. The accident was as once reported to Capt. Jagers who put the steamer about and proceeded to the assistance of the unfortunate man. The water was very rough, but the man managed to hang on to his overturned boat till rescued from his dangerous position. He proved to be a Victoria fisherman, and owing to his timely rescue is little the worse of his immersion. The sea was too rough to permit of his boat being rescued.

A Successful Concert.
As anticipated the concert at the Y. M. C. A. rooms was a pronounced success in every particular. There was a large and warmly interested as well as appreciative audience whose expectations were fully realized. Signori Bistoli's and Montanelli's and Miss Bistoli's contributions were the crowning features of the evening. The capabilities of the former have been deservedly established and have made them very popular, and the numbers in which they appeared last evening were received with marked appreciation. Miss Bistoli was imminently tunny in several recitations, on each occasion receiving genuine accolades. Miss Montanelli was deservedly appreciated; she was in excellent voice and sang well. The Misses Twiss contributed a vocal duet very tastefully; Mr. Ed. Marvin, jun. sang very appreciably and a quartet by Messrs. Smith, Moir, Grant and Kinnard brought a successful and highly enjoyable concert to a close.

To Be Buried at Home.
It seems that the late Mr. James Blair, whose death so suddenly occurred at the Brunswick hotel on Thursday evening, had been a victim of "La Grippe," when that dread visitor was here, last winter. The effect it had upon his system never left him, and he fell an easy victim to a severe cold, which developed into influenza, and the bowels. The body has been embalmed, and was last evening put on board the Islander for shipment to Palmerston, Ont., the home of the deceased. A funeral service will be held in St. Andrew's church, Vancouver, to-day, on arrival of the Islander, after which Mr. George Blair will accompany his brother's remains to their last long home in the east. Deceased was over three years a resident of the Terminal city, where he had amassed a good deal of money and gathered round him a large circle of friends, who regard his unexpected demise with unfeigned sorrow.

An Early Caller.
When John Chinaman takes to burglarizing he seems to act considerably for the feelings of his clients; he waits till the night is well spent, so that the inhabitants of the house he visits may not spend many sleepless hours should they be so unkind as to wake during the course of his operations. To be sure, at least with a Chinaman, yesterday morning, bordering on the hour of 4 o'clock, he first tried to effect an entrance into the house 63 Pandora street, occupied by Mr. Atkinson, but failed in the attempt. Thinking one house as good as another, and not wishing to go to any extended trouble, John turned his attention to No. 65, but his manoeuvres round the other house had roused Mr. Atkinson, and that gentleman came down on the Chinaman with a club, whereupon he didn't wait to discuss. Mr. Onick, who resides in No. 65, was awake by this time, and came down to lock the doors, in order to prevent a repetition of the Chinaman's visit.

Naval Entertainment.

Again in Operation.
Messrs. W. L. Johnson & Co., of Gambier island, Howe sound, whose shingle mill and machinery were completely destroyed by fire some seven weeks ago, have rebuilt and are now running on a larger scale than ever. Since starting up over a million shingles have been turned out, for which a ready market has been found. The new mill is larger than the old one, its capacity is greater, but so great is the demand for its output that the establishment has to be kept running night and day.

Mr. Henry Grieve.
The death is announced of Mr. Henry Grieve, one of the most esteemed and best respected residents of Comox. He came to his death by falling from a wagon to the thrashing floor, receiving fatal injuries, and living only three hours afterwards. He resided in this province fifteen years ago and became a man of considerable prominence. His funeral was the largest that has ever taken place at Comox. He leaves a widow and ten children to mourn his loss.

The Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium.
The Y. M. C. A. gymnasium will re-open on Tuesday, September 2nd, by an exhibition, when a regular gymnastic exhibition will be given. At the same time a reception will be given to Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Brown. Mr. Brown is secretary of the international committee. A programme of music and refreshments has been provided, and it is requested that the members will make the occasion a success by turning out in force and bringing their lady friends.

The Salmon Situation.
The Daily Commercial, of San Francisco, has the following on the salmon situation: "The impression prevails that bottom has been touched, and in fact there is a slightly better feeling in the market for best brands. The Columbia river pack has been closely sold up, but as yet the exact amount remaining unsold on the river cannot be ascertained. The British Columbia pack exceeds earlier estimates, but definite information as to its size is not yet available, and nothing can be known of the total Alaska pack until receipts are in. The American Grocer reports the New York market as follows: 'The demand continues active, with prices for Alaska brands very irregular, ranging from $1 to $1.20, as to the label; for future delivery offers are plenty at 90 to 95 on the coast, it being no trouble to buy good brands at 90c. f.o.b. at San Francisco. An enormous supply here and in England, a total pack of large dimensions is more than the market can stand, and hence the depressing of the price. A unit in expressing the opinion that present low figures will be maintained, and thus send an enormous quantity into consumption and add to the popularity of the article. Columbia river brands, $1.40 to $1.75; flat tins 25c. higher; brands with the key attachment are growing in favor and are sure to become popular with consumers.'"

PORT ANGELES.
What is B-n? / eoon H nnei t Develop the Thruvin. L't e Town Across the S railz.
Yesterday Mr. B. F. Schwartz, president of the First National Bank, of Port Angeles, who is a guest at the Drard, had a brief conversation with a COLONIST reporter, to whom he showed a telegraph announcing that Senator Allen's bill had passed reorganizing the Puget Sound customs district and making Port Angeles a sub-port. He announced that it was expected soon to have a perfectly direct communication with Victoria, the distance between the two cities being only about an hour and a quarter. Port Angeles had already begun the work of grading two streets at a cost of $75,000, and 150 men were now at work upon them. Companies, of which he was president, were putting in extensive electric lighting apparatus and water supply plant. He remarked that there had just been completed in Victoria, two extensive deals in Port Angeles property. On Sept. 20 a vote would be taken on the proposal to bond Clallam county for $100,000 to build 60 miles of railway to Quialoy, passing through one of the best agricultural sections in the Southwest part of the county, and leading through a magnificent timber district. On November 5 a vote would be taken on the question of moving the county seat from Duwamish to Port Angeles. A railway was being built to connect with the Port Townsend Southern at Port Discovery, which would shorten the distance to Portland by 175 miles. A number of San Francisco capitalists had lately invested in Port Angeles enterprises. Mr. Schwartz said he had noticed, with pleasure, that the Charleston was to visit Port Angeles. It was only natural that the U. S. graving dock should be placed at that point, as being the most eligible on the Pacific. With regard to the stories of jumping claims on the Government Reserve near the townsite, in the hope that the squatters might thereby acquire property rights, he had no idea that they would have any effect. Even if the claims of the jumpers were sustained, which he did not anticipate, there were only about 600 of them. This would still leave 2,000 lots in the hands of the government to be surveyed and sold. Port Angeles, he was convinced, next to Tacoma and Seattle, would be the principal city on the Sound, and no booming of other places could prevent this. There was a natural breakwater at Port Angeles, with no rocks or obstructions to entering a magnificent and extensive harbor. This was one additional reason why Port Angeles should lay claim to and maintain its position among its rivals.

Battle Creek, Mich., has a smart boy.
The muzzling-by-law is now in force and one of the principal citizens had to go to the pound three times in one week to get the dog out. He wondered how it was, the canine rarely left the house. The pound-keeper told him the same boy brought the dog each time and received his 50 cents. The citizen watched and caught his own son doing the dog-catching act. As it cost the parent $1 each time and the boy only got 50 cents, the father strapped the son and then compromised by hiring him to let the dog alone.

A mass of pure, compact rock salt, said to contain 90,000,000 tons of the mineral, is located on an island 185 feet high, which rises from a sea marsh on the route from Bradbury to New Iberia, up the river Teche, in Louisiana.

VICTORIA'S WATER SUPPLY.
Yesterday's Test Shows the Utter Inadequacy of the Old 12-inch Main for Existing Requirements.
The long-expected test of the 12-inch main and its ability to supply the requirements of the city took place yesterday, and fully demonstrated the utter futility of those who have been contending that the 12-inch main is sufficient to supply the existing wants. The 16-inch main having been cut off early in the morning, the pressure gradually fell until, according to the gauge, it was discovered that in six hours a column of water 75 feet in height had completely disappeared. In fact that, according to the returns of pressure at the hydrants, water could only have been obtained at, for instance, the corner of Cook and Pandora streets by pumping. Indeed, at that level, there would have been but the smallest stream, one utterly insufficient for any practical purposes. At noon, the large factories being shut off, the supply began slowly to increase, but it was only when the 16-inch main had been turned on again for something like four hours that the pressure rose to the original figures. The test amply demonstrated that for ordinary consumptive demands the 12-inch main was altogether insufficient, and that, had a fire occurred, with no other source of water supply, the inhabitants of Victoria would have been altogether at its mercy.

BLAINE ON RECIPROCITY.

WATERVILLE, Me., Aug. 29. — About 2,500 people assembled at a mass meeting here to-night to listen to an address by Secretary Blaine, who said the United States has reached a point when one of its highest duties is to enlarge the area of its foreign trade. Under protection we have developed a volume of manufactures which, in many departments, overruns the demands of the home market. In the field of agriculture, we can do far more than produce the breadstuffs and provisions for our own people; nor would it be an ambitious destiny for so great a country as ours to manufacture only what we can consume or to produce what we can eat. We are already in many fabrics and many products far beyond that, and our great demand is the expansion of trade with countries where we can find profitable exchanges. We are not seeking annexation of territory. We do not desire it unless it should come by the volition of a people who might ask the priceless boon of a place under the protection of the flag of the Union. I feel sure that for a long time to come the people of the United States will be wisely content with our present area, and not launch upon any scheme of annexation. At the same time, I think we should be wisely content if we did not seek to engage in what the younger Pitt so well termed the annexation of trade. I am here to speak of the expansion of our foreign trade, not by any novel process, nor by any mode that will shock or disturb home industries, nor by any mode that will invite our people to rash experiments, or will launch us in doubtful and dangerous experiments. What I mean to speak of briefly is a system of reciprocity not in conflict with our protective tariff, but supplementary thereto and presenting a field of enterprise that will richly repay the effort and energy of the American people. We shall find it instructive and valuable to examine into the sources of our imports, and the destination of our exports, to strike a balance between the two. Take the last year 1889. In that year our whole exports to all the countries in the three continents of Europe, Asia and Africa and to Australia, Canada and to Hawaii amounted in round numbers to $658,000,000 and our imports from all these countries amounted in round numbers to $529,000,000, showing from that vast trade we had a balance of $129,000,000 in our favor equivalent to that amount of gold among our people; but, when all the accounts were closed, instead of having $129,000,000 in our favor we had a balance of $12,000,000 against us from our foreign trade. We must therefore have lost $142,000,000 in our commerce with countries outside of those to which I have referred. Where could we have found such a large adverse balance? Let me tell you. We lost $41,000,000 in Cuba from which our imports were $52,000,000 and to which our exports were only $11,000,000. In the republic of Brazil we lost $31,000,000; our imports from Brazil were $39,000,000, our exports to Brazil were $8,000,000. In Mexico we lost $10,000,000. The imports from Mexico were $21,000,000, our exports to Mexico were $11,000,000. To sum up, our imports from countries south of us, both insular and continental, on this hemisphere, were $216,000,000, our exports to them were $74,000,000. The balance against us in our trade with them therefore is $142,000,000, exceeding our gain from all the rest of the world by $33,000,000. The speaker in conclusion said that we should strive to expand our trade with the South American countries by the most practicable mode of reciprocity that can be determined. Speaking on the state of affairs, Mr. Blaine said it would be a public calamity if the four men now representing Maine in Congress were not re-elected. The speech was willingly cheered.

THE TRADE SITUATION.

Bradstreet's Review of Business for the Week Ending August 23—The Prospects.

Special telegrams to Bradstreet's all report the continuance of increasing commercial and industrial activity, the September outlook being for an active distribution of staples. Boots and shoes are selling at prices materially higher than a year ago, with the autumn demand under a good headway. Raw wool is firmer, while among the most active staples are clothing and seasonal dry goods. Anthracite coal remains dull as consumers are still disinclined to order freely.

Hogs are lower in price on heavier receipts. Wheat has reacted three cents from the high prices touched early in the week, and corn and oats have, as is natural, sympathized with the decline, due to foreign markets refusing to follow the further advance in the domestic markets together with some slight improvement in the crop reports.

At New York a very large autumn trade is going on. Share speculation is dull, but values have improved on the easier tone of the money market and the collapse of the railroad troubles. Foreign interests are again large buyers of American stocks and securities. The bank clearings at 51 cities show a gain over this week last year of 16.3 per cent.

There is no advance in the price of iron, but an astonishing feature is found in the ease with which the enormous total output of the furnaces is absorbed. Within a year domestic stocks have produced more than 9,000,000 net tons of iron, placing the U. S. in the front rank as a producer.

Dry goods jobbers are actively engaged, and agents are doing a good re-order business in fall and winter goods. As a consequence cotton and wool dress goods are in chief movement. Foreign goods show more life, but are still behind the average in demand. The very heavy and interior movement of woolen machinery is still idle, but values are fairly firm. Cotton is 20 cents off in all markets on the continued liquidation of the old crop. There is a heavy new crop movement, and good advices from the producing sections. The new crop deliveries are well held.

The business failures reported to Bradstreet's number 134 in the U. S. this week, against 169 last week, and 178 this week last year. Canada had 26 this week, against 29 last week. The total number of failures in the U. S., January 1 to date, is 6,797, against 6,603 in a like portion of 1889.

AN ENGLISH GAME.

It Beats Croquet for Out-of-Door Diversion, and is Already Popular.

A new out-of-door game, called "The Colors," has been invented by Mrs. A. Hartshorne, of Bradbourne Hall, near Derby, England. It may be played by four or eight players. For the four players the materials for the game are four sets of five posts, painted red, white, blue and green. Each player has a little rack, on which he or she carries eight rings, two each of the same color, and two small flags bearing the letters "R" and "L," signifying right and left. There are also flags, painted black, to indicate a miss or "fault."

The court should be 60 feet long by 35 feet wide. To arrange the ground the posts are planted in sets of five, each post two feet six inches apart from its neighbor, in a figure which would form a cross, the first or starting set being at one end of the ground, the end or finishing set at the extreme end of the court, exactly opposite the start, and the side sets in the middle of each side of the court.

Each player being furnished with his complement of eight rings, which have previously been shaken up in a bag, two partners stand on each side of the starting set of posts facing each other. The whole object of the game is to get rid of the rings in such a manner that they retain their proper sequence on the posts. There is no throwing or running. The players walk leisurely from set to set, deposit their rings if they can, and then walk on to the next set of posts. One player may get rid of a ring by placing it on his partner's ring and any player may play two rings following, if possible.

There is no hurry or scurry, but there is a certain amount of science in the game, and, of course, it may be varied in many ways. It may be called the quadrille of garden games. It will never in any way interfere with tennis, because it appeals to totally different people from tennis players, but there is plenty of room for it, and it is certainly prettier and more interesting than croquet, though it seems so simple.

The new game was played the other afternoon in the garden of the inner temple by a number of trained players before a party of specially invited guests.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE SNAKE CHARMER.

Manner in Which a Woman Handles Poisonous Reptiles.

Lulu La Toska is the name of the snake-charmer who handles the reptiles at Barnum's show. She is a Russian by birth, and has had control over snakes from her babyhood.

"How do you account for your power over snakes?" was asked by a Chicago Globe reporter at the close of a performance in which she had hung 450 pounds of live coils around her neck and body.

"It is a charm I have possessed since my birth. I was born to govern them, and the mark of a snake encircles me. Since two years old I have played with them. They have bitten me twice, but I am still alive, as you see."

"Where do you get the snakes?"

"They come from India. I am going to get thirty new ones in a few days. I lost one of the old ones I had had for fourteen years, in St. Louis. The stage fell on him and crushed him to death. Another one tried to bite me, and struck herself. She cost lots of money, from $150 to $300, and it's a big misfortune to have one die."

"How often do they eat?"

"Every three weeks usually, but the mean one that bit itself to death had not tasted any thing for a year and a half. Did you notice me tickle one of them under the chin? That's Emma. She likes it, too, and just lays her head back to enjoy it. She eats two chickens every week now. They are cross and don't eat when they are blind, which they are every six weeks. Then I have to touch them lightly so they will know when I am coming. If they turn their heads to look at me I pick them up, but if they stretch their heads away I let them alone, for they are ugly. We have to humor them like children."

"Is their bite poisonous?" asked the reporter.

"Yes! I handle an Indian bwarpython, one of the most poisonous snakes in the world. I also play with the black mamba without any trouble."

A PECULIAR WOMAN.

An Aged Spinster Who Has Never Traveled Two Miles.

One of the most remarkable people in Georgia, according to the Macon Telegraph, is Miss Amanda Anderson of the East Macon district, near the Twigg line.

Miss Anderson is sixty years old and is of perfectly sound mind, being even more than usually bright. Her eccentricity shows itself in her desire to remain in one place and never go beyond a certain limit. The longest journey she has ever made was from the place where she was born to the place where she now resides, a distance of a mile and a half. She lives within three miles of the East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia railroad and yet she has never seen a train of cars. Among the other many things which she has yet to see for the first time are a store-house, or a building built of brick. She claims also that she has never seen but one painted house.

Miss Anderson's ideas of religion are necessarily vague, as she has never been inside a church or listened to a sermon or a prayer, unless it was before she can remember, when it is possible that her mother carried her to church.

Although Miss Anderson's nearest neighbor lives within three hundred yards of her she has never seen his house but once in three years. Her well ran dry last season and she was forced to go to her neighbor's well for water. She appeared perfectly lost and said she had some trouble in finding her way back home.
